A little more than halfway through the annual Japanese Maritime Self-Defense Force Ekiden, a large 40-lap relay race running most of the day, Capt. Jason M. Kut, station supply officer, grabs his team's sash and begins his leg of the race near the port here March 10. Kut, an avid runner, plans to participate in the Tokyo Marathon 2009 later this month. ## Road tax: ■ Pay to drive or walk and save

LANCE CPL. SALVADOR MORENO
IWAKUNI APPROACH STAFF

Road tax officials will be at the Provost Marshal's office here to collect the annual road tax from station vehicle owners April 8-10 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The annual road tax is a tax by the Japanese government on all vehicles that's due every April in order to legally drive a vehicle.

"All vehicle owners have to pay it. If you don't have a vehicle, you don't have to worry about it," said Sgt. Carrie White, Provost Marshal's Office physical security specialist.

The price of the road tax varies. For heavy vehicles, the cost ranges from ¥7,500 to ¥32,000. For light vehicles, the range of pay is ¥500 to ¥3,000.

Motorcycle and scooter owners need to pay the tax as well. They fall into the light vehicle bracket.

"If you do not take advantage of the road tax officials coming to PMO, then you have to go off base to pay it," said White.

Light vehicles must be taken to city hall and heavy vehicles to the New Symphonia building if the vehicle owners are not able to go to PMO.

"Maps and directions can be acquired at Pass and Registration in the lobby where they are posted in a folder," said White.

To pay the road tax, vehicle owners need their payment in the form of yen and their vehicle title. If they own multiple vehicles, they need to bring a title for each vehicle.

"If you do not pay your Japanese road tax and you get caught driving the vehicle, you risk having your vehicle eventually towed and impounded along with risk being detained," said White.

If vehicle owners are going to be deployed, on temporary additional duty, or on leave during the month of April, they can have anyone pay it for them.

"All they need is the title and the payment. Anybody can pay," said White.

The road tax must be paid in order to get the new base decal as well. Requirements to obtain a new updated base decal are the vehicle, a Japanese title, Japanese Compulsory Insurance, secondary insurance, and a copy of the road tax receipt.

PMO strongly encourages everyone to come during the month of April. After that, you are driving illegally, said White.

Suicide awareness, everyone's job

LANCE CPL. DANIEL NEGRETE
IWAKUNI APPROACH STAFF

Forty-one Marines committed suicide in 2008 and another 146 tried to commit suicide.

According to Marine Administrative Message 0134/09, "this is our highest rate of suicide since 1995 and reflects an unacceptable loss of life for the Marine Corps."

The MARADMIN went on to suggest that more training on suicide prevention is necessary.

"Suicide awareness helps reduce the number of suicide cases," said Lt. Cmdr. Juan Q. Cometa, station chaplain. "It's important for people to know there are chaplains, counselors and other means of finding help."

Beginning March 16, Cometa and other suicide prevention experts began conducting a series of briefs and presentations to bolster suicide awareness here.

The briefs and presentations will last until March 31 with the ultimate goal of

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Wanting yours

LT. CMDR. ALLEN R. KUSS
CHAPLAIN

There is an old German saying, "Clean your own front steps before you comment on your neighbor's steps." Daily in these difficult economic times, the media informs us of the hoarding of wealth, and the squandering of wealth and resources by some people around the world.

It is easy to feel good about ourselves and congratulate ourselves when we make comparisons. But before we sit too high on our pedestal, we need to see what rottenness underlies what is happening.

Hoarding, or the biblical word covetousness, is the inordinate or excessive love of getting and possessing money, possessions, position, and even knowledge.

Covetousness is a serious moral flaw when it becomes a habit. It becomes serious when we are willing to do anything, whatever to possess our objects of attraction. This vice is born of a covetous spirit and heart, which is contrary to generosity and charity.

The word covetousness is seldom used by the media because it sounds so judgmental. Its usage would mean that we might reflect to see how this vice, like any other, harms us and our society.

How many times have we heard it said, "I would do anything to get that." The sad fact is people will do anything to possess money, material wealth and social positions.

From the moral flaw of covetousness come the media stories covering: fraud, lying, perjury, violence, greed and hard-heartedness toward the economic destitute.

Unfortunately, the 10th commandment's admonition of "thou shall not covet either the neighbor's spouse or goods" goes woefully glossed over.

The cure and the answer to this vice is generosity. This means we need to share our time, our possessions and our money with others.

Generosity stems from the understanding and belief that all things come from a gracious almighty God. It is faith in God who will continue to provide for His creatures and who cares for what He has created.

Generosity shows both trust and hope based on faith in God.

In showing generosity toward others, we mirror His goodness, compassion and ongoing care.

Q. Who is allowed to ride the station shuttle bus system?

A. Marine Corps Air Station Order P11240.5L section 4003.1 indicates the shuttle bus system is primarily for active duty military and Department of Defense personnel. Family members are encouraged to use the system on a space available basis. Nowhere in the order does it specify a minimum age requirement to use the bus; however, parents are highly encouraged to take caution when children are riding the bus unsupervised.

Patriot Express Space Available: How it all works

LANCE CPL. CHRIS KUTLESA
IWAKUNI APPROACH STAFF

When news broke of the Patriot Express' return, many started wondering about the opportunities of Space Available travel.

The main purpose of the Patriot Express is to support those making a permanent change of station, but that does not mean there is no opportunity for people interested in Space-A.

In the past, the Patriot Express stopped coming to Iwakuni due to half-filled flights. This time, Marine Corps Air Station Iwakuni has an allotment of 44 seats available on the flight. The more people using the Patriot Express the better chance it will stay around. Here are some answers to Space-A questions:

1. What is Space Available travel?

Space Available travel is travel aboard Air Mobility Command or other Department of Defense controlled aircraft.

Movement in the time frame passengers may wish is not guaranteed. In cases where customers are not selected for Space-A travel, it is their responsibility to have sufficient funds to complete their journey or return home via commercial means.

2. Who can fly Space-A?

Active Duty Service Members and their family members with proper documentation, DOD civilians with return rights on Unfunded Environmental Morale Leave orders, and retired military personnel and their dependents if accompanied by the retired member are allowed to fly Space-A.

Local hired DOD civilians cannot travel Space-A unless they fall under one of the above categories.

3. How do I sign up for Space-A travel?

You can sign up for Space-A travel in person, by fax or through the sign-up section of the Space Available site on the Iwakuni intranet.

Fax numbers are 253-4294 or 253-3301. Military members must be physically on leave before attempting to fax or sign up in person for Space-A travel.

All passengers 10 years of age and older must have a valid military or dependent ID card in their possession. All travel outside of Japan is considered international travel and requires passports and visas per the Foreign Clearance Guide (DOD 4500.54-G) for all non-military members.

4. What is Space-A showtime?

Space-A show time is 9 a.m. every Saturday at the MCAS Iwakuni Air Terminal. Show time at Seattle is 11:20 p.m. The Patriot Express returns from Seattle every Wednesday. All passengers, required documentation and baggage must be present during the show time. All passengers that make the space available show time must remain present at the terminal. Show times can change at a moment's notice. Call the passenger service section (253-5509) to verify Space-A show times.

5. Parking

Due to current force protection restrictions, there is no parking allowed at the air terminal. Passengers are required to take the local shuttle bus or ride in a government vehicle to the terminal.

6. Flight information

Flight information will no longer be provided via phone, fax or e-mail. A basic flight schedule can be found on the Iwakuni intranet by clicking on the Space Available Icon. Flight information can be found on channel five; the station is solely dedicated to the air terminal.

7. Baggage limits

Check-in baggage: Space available travelers are authorized two pieces of checked baggage not to exceed 70 pounds each. If any piece exceeds 70 pounds or 62 linear inches, it counts as 2 pieces and fulfills the allowance. Travel aboard C-12 or C-35 type aircraft restricts total baggage to 30 pounds. No excess baggage is available for space available passengers.

Hand-carried baggage & infant car seats: Space-A travelers are authorized carry-on items that do not exceed a total of 45 linear inches and must fit under the seat of the traveler or in the overhead compartment.

Infant car seats are recommended for all children who may fall into one of three categories: under the age of two years old, less than 40 inches in height or less than 40 pounds. Infant car seats do not count against passenger's check-in or carry-on allowances.

8. Pets

Pets are not authorized to be moved under the Space-A travel program.

9. Costs

A Federal Inspection Fee of $12 and a $15.40 head tax, bringing the total to $27.40, is collected from each Space-A passenger originating from overseas on AMC Commercial Contract flights. A $15.40 head tax is collected for those travelers originating from the United States to an international destination on contracted commercial flights. Above fees only apply to commercial contracted flights. All government aircraft Space-A flights are free of charge.

10. Restricted items

The Transportation Security Agency (TSA) publishes lists of restricted items that cannot be carried on an aircraft and also identifies what items are not allowed in your checked baggage. Military terminals are obligated to enforce these restrictions. Check the TSA Web site, <http://www.TSA.gov>, to get a list of the latest restrictions.

For more information regarding the Patriot Express and Space-A travel, contact a passenger service assistant at 253-5509.

Suicide Awareness Month informs educating all service members here on ways to prevent suicide.

"Unfortunately, we can't measure emotional and psychological fitness as we can measure physical fitness," said Cometa. "We have the PFT (Physical Fitness Test) to measure physical fitness, but must rely on our perceptions to determine a co-worker's, friend's or fellow service member's emotional well being."

The upcoming briefs will focus on ways to monitor and detect anxiety, depression and typical pre-suicidal behavior in others.

The warning signs and risk factors of suicide include abrupt changes in personality, giving away possessions, talking of wanting to die or commit suicide, problems with co-workers, and neglecting work and personal appearance.

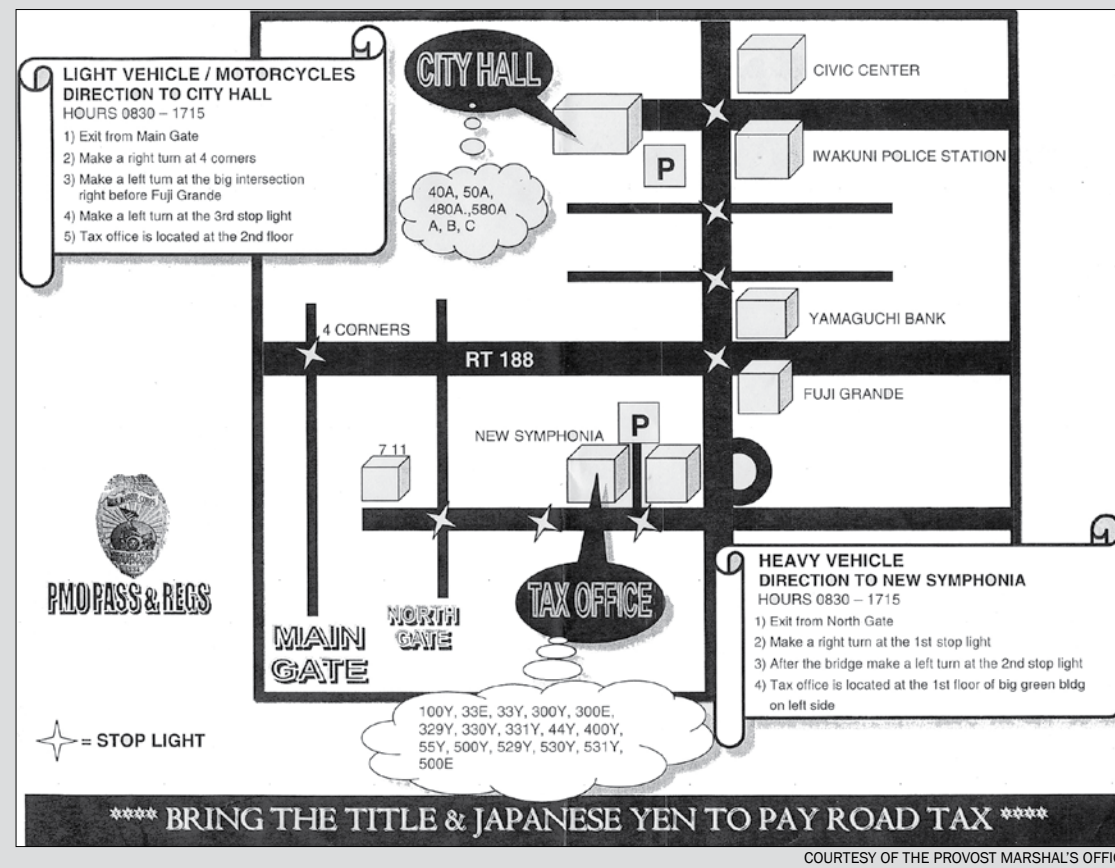

"Just like we say 'never leave a Marine behind' in combat, we must bring that same doctrine to our day-to-day lives," said Cometa. "The signs are usually there, so it becomes our responsibility to act upon them."

The briefs will also attempt to reduce the stigma that prevents Marines from seeking help.

They will delineate the different options for seeking help, whether it be speaking with a chaplain, counselor or medical professional.

Scheduling for the briefs will vary from unit to unit but will be conducted through the end of March as part of Suicide Awareness Month.

KORAT ROYAL THAI AIR FORCE BASE, Thailand — A flight crew Marine watches as Maj. Brad Hipp, Marine Fighter Attack Squadron (All Weather) 224 pilot training officer and the red team air mission commander, prepares to take off to participate in an interoperability flight training scenario as Exercise Cope Tiger 2009 progressed to its third day here March 11. During the training scenario, participating Cope Tiger aviation units are split into opposing red and blue teams in which the red team act out the aggressors.

KORAT ROYAL THAI AIR FORCE BASE, Thailand — U.S. Marines and Air Force, Royal Thai Air Force and Republic of Singapore Air Force aviation units took to the skies to continue interoperability flight training scenarios as Exercise Cope Tiger 2009 progressed to its third day here March 11.

Scenarios, with a focus on mission accomplishment through multilateral interoperability, have been planned in which aviation units are split into opposing red and blue teams in order to better the working relationship with all participating nations.

Iwakuni-based Marine Fighter Attack Squadron (All Weather) 224 aircraft were placed in the red multinational force team along with Singaporean and Thai aircraft to act out as the aggressors against the blue multinational tional force team made up of the U.S. Air Force and Royal Thai Air Force units.

"Being able to accomplish a tactful mission with so many backgrounds of training, language barriers and experience levels is huge," said Capt. Robert Guyette, a VMFA(AW)-224 pilot. "Seeing somebody that does not talk like you or fly like you - to be somewhat comfortable with that is invaluable because you spend less time worrying about the little things, and you can concentrate on the mission."

The scenario, involving approximately 28 aircraft, required the red team to conduct offensive actions and strike three different target areas the blue team was tasked to defend.

Guyette said the most important thing he saw and learned from during the scenario was the planning that went into getting Marine F/A-18s, Thai F-16s and came more apparent as the scenarios began to take place.

"I was very impressed with all the forces," said Maj. Brad Hipp, VMFA(AW)-224 pilot training officer and the red team air mission commander during the scenario.

The Singaporean and Thai Air Forces' flight leads were impressive while their situational awareness was superb, added Hipp.

The combat scenario carried out by the opposing teams focused more on testing the blue multinational force's various defensive skills.

"It was a great training opportunity," said Hipp. "Even though we were providing the training today for the blue team, we still got a lot out of it through the planning, the coordination between the multinational air forces, and then executing and getting all those airplanes airborne."

The members of the red and blue team switch off day-to-day to execute training on both sides.

Singaporean F-5S together and airborne.

Marines assigned to Combat Logistics Company 36 frequently visit the Kinnan Yochien (kindergarten) complex throughout the year as part of their ongoing effort to build a strong relationship with the local community.

On March 12, four CLC-36 Marines had the privilege of presenting certificates of congratulations to the kindergarten's most recent graduating class.

The four CLC-36 Marines stood tall in their dress blue uniforms before an audience of teachers, parents and students.

One-by-one, the Marines called out the names of 20 soon-to-be first graders.

"This is something these kids will treasure for the rest of their lives," said Shigeko Ishii, the kindergarten's principal. "We appreciate what (the Marines) do here for us and the friendship we have developed."

For more than five years, CLC-36 Marines have made visits to the kindergarten with the intent of exposing the 5- and 6-year-olds to common English phrases and interacting with them in their small classrooms.

The visits usually happen once a month and involve the participation of different Marines each time, all of whom volunteer for it.

"It's very refreshing to take a moment from work to spend time with the children," said Cpl. Andrew E. Lund, one of the four CLC-36 Marines who participated in the graduation ceremony March 12. "It's kind of awkward at first, not knowing how to act with Japanese kids, but eventually you get into the spirit of being around kids again and you get lost playing games with them and having fun with them."

The main reason the four CLC-36 Marines presided over the kindergarten's graduation ceremony March 12 was to mark the conclusion of the kids' first introduction to the English language.

Each child will interact with the visiting Marines eight to 10 times a year, said Ishii. The first time they see the Marines is sometimes the first time they see a foreigner and hear a foreign language.

As the children progress into first grade and elementary school, they will begin formal classroom instruction on the English language.

"The Marines helped them get a head start here at the kindergarten," said Ishii. "That's why we hope they continue to come."

The CLC-36 Marines met with the principal and other teachers and staff after the graduation ceremony to plan their next visit.

The next visit will take place April 8 when the incoming kindergartners take a short spring break after completing preschool.

The sun had just risen and groups of runners were already stretching in preparation for a fierce and friendly competition. The crisp ocean air swept across the crowd, leaving many participants' arms crossed and faces flushed. An announcement over the loud speaker called runners to the starting line. At the quick bang from a pistol, the runners leaped into action.

JMSDF invited local U.S. service members to the event that has become an annual day of fun and exercise along with the opportunity to build relationships within units and the community.

"It helps us develop the mindset of pride and teamwork," said Capt. Hiroshi Horii, JMSDF Fleet Air Wing 31 chief of staff.

Approximately forty JMSDF teams and three U.S. teams participated in the event. Each team participating in the race was made up of a diverse range of runners, men and women, young and old. A point system was designed to keep the race competitive for the wide range of runners. Participants were scored based on the average for a person of the same sex and age.

While Meredith spoke of the Japanese's gift, others declared their admiration for their persistent dedication to fitness.

The competition lasted well into the afternoon. Spectators held flags and cheered until every last runner crossed the finish line. Who came in first, second or third didn't seem to matter to the crowd.

"I think the event was very helpful and fruitful," said Horii. "It gave an opportunity for U.S. personnel to get to know Japanese culture, and at the same time both U.S. and Japanese service members got to run together for mutual, friendly competition."

Horii said he hopes U.S. service members will be interested in participating in more JMSDF sports events.

HIGHLIGHTING MARINES AND SAILORS AROUND THE GLOBE

All-female Marine team conducts first mission in southern Afghanistan

LANCE CPL. MONTY BURTON
SPECIAL PURPOSE MARINE
AIR-GROUND TASK FORCE
AFGHANISTAN

FARAH PROVINCE, Islamic Republic of Afghanistan — Marines of 3rd Battalion, 8th Marine Regiment, the ground combat element of Special Purpose Marine Air Ground Task Force — Afghanistan, now have a special group of individuals to help them complete their mission in the Islamic Republic of Afghanistan.

The Marines employ a select group of all-female Marines from within SPMAGTF-A who are trained to interact with the Afghan female population — a task considered culturally unacceptable for their male Marine brethren operating in the Islamic republic.

A similar program has been used in combat operations in Iraq, but this is the first time Marine forces in Afghanistan have employed the concept.

Capt. Mike Hoffman, commanding officer of 3/8's Company I, said the all-female team is an important asset for his Marines.

"(The team) provides us access to half of the population that we normally do not have access to," Hoffman said. "They did extremely well interacting with the female villagers."

2nd Lt. Johannah Shaffer, the team leader, said their first mission, a cordon and search in support of Operation Pathfinder, was very successful.

"We were accepted by both the men and women villagers and were able to obtain valuable information about the way they lived and what they thought about the Marine Corps operating in the area," Shaffer said.

During their first mission, the female Marines deliberately donned brightly colored head and neck scarves as a sign of cultural respect to the Afghan women.

"The scarves showed the Afghan women that we were women too, and we respect their culture," said Shaffer. "They automatically felt more comfortable with us. They showed us their homes, and even though they didn't have much they were still very generous to us. They accepted us as sisters, and we're glad that we were here to help them."

Although Afghan women tend to be more reserved than Afghan men, they still have a large influence on their children, Shaffer said, so engaging with them is important.

"If the women know we are here to help them, they will likely pass that on to their children," she said. "If the children have a positive perspective of alliance forces, they will be less likely to join insurgent groups or participate in insurgent activities."

Hoffman said the female Marines were also accepted by the village men.

"They were not opposed by the villagers," Hoffman said. "They had no problem allowing (the team) the chance to interact with their women."

According to Shaffer, the concept employed by her team varies greatly from the program in Iraq because of differences in Afghan culture.

"The cultural background here is completely different than that of Iraq," Shaffer said.

"Women here are more timid than in Iraq. There is less of a chance that Afghan women would try to harm us because they understand that we are here to help them."

"We also do not know much about the daily life of Afghan women," she said. "This provides us not only the opportunity to learn about the women, but also to build and maintain faith and trust of the Afghan women."

The mission of SPMAGTF-A is to conduct counterinsurgency operations, with a focus on training and mentoring the Afghan national police. Operation Pathfinder was a deliberate counterinsurgency engagement conducted in coordination with Afghan national security forces along Route 515 in southern Afghanistan.

Marine Aviation Logistics Squadron 12 Da FAM played Marine Fighter Attack Squadron (All Weather) 242 Bats March 16 at IronWorks Gym, kicking off the intramural spring basketball season.

The roster for the season boasts a total of nine teams made up by units around the station.

"None of us are all stars," said Gunnery Sgt. Elijah Franklin, aviation supply chief for MALS-12. "We are all Marines all out here for fun."

Each team will play five games by the time the season comes to a close on April 22.

After the season ends, the final teams will participate in the post-season playoffs April 27 through May 13.

It may be too soon to start predicting who will be going to the playoffs, but some teams are already showing a promising future.

By the end of the first half, Da FAM had a 17- point lead on the Bats, bringing the score to 32-15. Da FAM had twice as many points along with fouls.

The Bats had three fouls to Da FAM's six, which could either mean the Bats were playing it easy or that Da FAM just wanted a win more.

"We got off of deployment and on to the court," said Lance Cpl. William Higgins, an airframer for VMFA(AW)-242.

Coming right off a deployment might have explained their slow first period.

After collecting themselves during halftime, the Bats came back with more of a fight.

By the end of the second half, the Bats had eight fouls and Da FAM had five.

Despite the Bats performance in the second half, Da FAM still pulled ahead and won 53-34.

"We came out and played our best," said Franklin. He said the team plans on practicing defense and working on hitting the board more.

"They (Da FAM) were a good team," said Higgins.

"They work well together. The more we practice the more we will come together as a team," Higgins added.

Both teams, knowing what they need to work on, will go on to play four more games before the end of the season.

To catch a game, visit the IronWorks Gym Mondays through Wednesdays until April 1. Games start at 6, 7 and 8 p.m.

The staff noncommissioned officers of Marine Aviation Logistics Squadron 12 here went skiing in Mizoho, Japan, Feb. 6. The trip pulled the senior leadership together for a time of rest from the normal hustle and bustle of the everyday workplace and allowed a full day of cohesion. The day was full of high speed runs and beginner face plants, but at the end of the day, everyone was full of smiles, fresh stories, new friends and more esprit de corps. The MALS-12 SNCO Association paid for transportation.
