Military gets free paper, news channel

Cpl. Dave Boni
Press Chief

In a recent announcement by the Department of Defense, service members can now enjoy the Stars and Stripes newspaper online and the Pentagon Channel, which is now aired on all military installations.

The two military information sources are being made available to the military in an effort to support the National Military Appreciation Month.

"The launch of the Pentagon Channel and the free Stars and Stripes electronic newspaper during Military Appreciation Month strengthens the Department's commitment to keeping America's active duty armed forces, National Guard and reserve force service members the best-informed military in the world," said a release from Stars and Stripes officials.

An electronic version of the "Stars and Stripes" newspaper was made available for downloading at no cost May 1, while the Pentagon Channel, the department's news and information television service, became available May 14.

Liberty cards to be issued

Cpl. Ryan Walker

Camp Courtney, Okinawa

CAMP COURTNEY, OKINAWA, Japan — Marines, Sailors and other military personnel assigned to Marine Corps Bases Japan and III Marine Expeditionary Force will be issued liberty cards June 11 to proactively curb off-base liberty infractions on Okinawa and mainland Japan.

Per Marine Corps Bases Japan Order 1050.6, every service member will be issued either a red or gold card indicating their liberty privileges. Gold cardholders maintain full liberty privileges, while red cardholders are only authorized on-base liberty from midnight to 5 a.m. The E-3s and below will be issued red liberty cards, while E-4s and E-5s may initially receive red liberty cards. However, commanders may grant gold liberty cards to NCOs who, in the commander's judgment, have demonstrated "Core Values" and exceptional performance. The E-6s and above will normally be issued gold liberty cards.

"This is a complex problem and there are no simple solutions," III MEF Commanding General Lt. Gen. Robert R. Blackman said. "In connection with the Liberty Campaign Plan, Liberty Buddy Order and Liberty Risk Program, this is just one more tool that will control and reduce the number of incidents we have."

With off-base incidents on the rise over the past few years, this new policy aims to regulate Marines during peak incident periods, according to Blackman.

"It is not a form of punishment or a form of restricting liberty," Blackman said. "We are in a unique position because we live in our area of operation, and that gives us special responsibilities."

As ambassadors and contributing members of the community, it is everyone's duty to leave a positive impression with the local citizens, Blackman explained. What individuals do on their liberty time has the potential to affect opinions about service members abroad.

To enforce the new policy, service members are required to present their cards upon entering and exiting base gates between midnight and 5 a.m.

"Everyone gets a liberty card," Blackman said. "The program will allow Marines who live off-base to get back and forth to work, but if they are a red cardholder they will follow the same rules as if they lived on-base."

Per Marine Corps Bases Japan Order 1050.6 service members issued a red liberty card may enter and exit the installation between the hours of midnight and 5 a.m. in the performance of official duties.

Service members must present their cards while on liberty to courtesy patrols and senior military leaders, when requested, to verify their liberty status. These checks will be conducted randomly.

To educate service members, a mandatory, one-time weekend liberty stand down will be implemented from $4:30~\rm p.m.$ June $11~\rm to~5~a.m.$ June 14. The purpose of the

Typhoon season storming to Japan

Due to the upcoming typhoon season, a seasonal tropical cyclone condition four has been instituted aboard the Station and will last until Nov. 30.

This tropical condition notifies residents of a possible tropical cyclone within 72 hours of the Station.

"The Station stays in TCCOR four because of Iwakuni's location in Japan," said Chief Warrant Officer David Fulton, Station weather officer. "Storms can develop at anytime and staying in this seasonal condition allows us to be better prepared if a storm does brew up."

According to recent studies, an average of 27.8 typhoons form each year, of which, 2.8 pass across Japanese land. As these typhoons approach Japan, typhoons tend to lose their strength due to the change from tropical to cooler waters.

Although these storms may weaken slightly before they hit land, typhoons are capable of causing large amounts of damage and should be taken serious.

Due to the potential of danger typhoons bring, the Station conducted its annual United States Forces Japan Typhoon Ready Exercise, which tests the base's destructive weather plan.

"Throughout the exercise we simulate a real typhoon and we go through all of the tropical cyclone conditions," said Fulton

Fulton also stated since it was just an exercise, the rest of the Station was not affected in any of the events.

The role residents do play is to actively take certain precautions needed in order to safely maneuver any storms that might head this way.

Supplies such as three days worth of water (one gallon per person), nonper-ishable food supplies and can opener, sanitary supplies, battery operated radio, flashlights, extra batteries, clothing and a first aid kit, all need to be stocked in homes.

"The homes aboard the Station are very-well built. If anything is going to cause any damage it will be loose objects outside flying into houses. People need to walk around their property and ensure anything that might be able to cause damage is secured," said Fulton. "Something as simple as a child's bicycle or a barbecue could be dangerous."

According to Richard Perry, Station safety officer and typhoon coordinator for the Station, residents need to be attentive to the conditions and act appropriately.

"Residents can tune into American Forces Network radio at AM 1575, AFN

Time for operational security

Station information sources give too many secrets away

Staff Sgt. Nathan M. Guy Letter to the Editor

Several months ago, while having lunch at a local McDonalds, I saw a large stack of the "Preview" magazine. Let it be known that I brought them back to base. Why was this an Look at how much information about base activates are published within the "Preview"; times, dates and locations of everything we do. Then there was the article in the "Torii Teller" dated Jan. 30.

The article that I'm addressing in this edition was titled "Bengals blare out of Iwakuni." When a new squadron is arriving or departing Marine Corps Air Station Iwakuni, does it make the news article any more powerful by letting the world know exactly how many aircraft the squadron arrived or departed with?

The only thing I see is that we are showing our hand of cards.

I understand the requirements this base has to report number of personnel and aircraft to the Japanese government. It is the same requirement that I must submit when assisting MAG-12 and the squadrons on deployments to other nations throughout the Pacific

What is not a requirement is publishing this in news articles in the "Torii Teller." These articles then end up in "Stars and Stripes." Once everyone finishes reading the paper, the majority place it in the trash can, which now becomes free information

When I questioned the Public Affairs Office on the operational security of their articles, their response was that's the way it has always been done. Wrong answer. As Marines, Sailors, and civilians, it is our responsibility to find new ways to maintain the security of our bases and our nation and to put these ideas in action.

Armed Forces Network airs several operational security commercials with Marines of Iwakuni playing their parts. Were these commercials made to make it look like we are being progoes far beyond the Public Affairs Office and the rest of the media coverage. Operational security measures should be in place at each level, from the base commander to the private, as well as the spouses to the children.

Personnel should be paying attention to what is thrown in the trash cans, phone conversations, e-mails

One thing to talk the talk, but it is another to walk the walk. It shouldn't only be thought as operational security, but as family security. Have you done your part?

Safely telling Marine Corps' story

Through clear guidelines, Public Affairs releases information to inform both Station personnel and families regarding issues here

> Compiled by Torii Teller Staff

First of all, let us thank you for taking the time to voice your concerns. We understand your fears regarding operational security and as you know, our opinions do not differ all that much on the tonic

Our mission at the "Torii Teller" is to provide timely news and information to the Station community. We believe we can successfully accomplish our mission without compromising operational security.

We have many Marines set eyes on our paper before we send it to press and anything we feel is even questionable, we remove. There have been times when we realized seemingly harmless information would have been better off unsaid.

Just like all residents of the Station, we try to always be aware of operational security. I think the area where we differ is what information is acceptable. The "Torii Teller" article you referenced was written about the successful unit deployment of Marine Fighter Attack Squadron 224. After six months here, the Bengals returned to Beaufort, S.C.

Our story appeared in the newspaper four days after the unit left. It mentioned their accomplishments and highlights of their deployment.

The story also mentioned how many Marines and the number of aircraft the unit had when they left. I know you believe this information should not have been published, but we did not say how many aircraft they are departing with, we said how many aircraft departed – past tense.

The unit was already home by the time our story hit the streets. This information is newsworthy and at the same time does not in any way compromise the unit. It is also naïve of you to think the departure of 12 jets and more than

180 Marines would go unnoticed by the base and surround-

In your letter, you say you questioned the Public Affairs Office and were simply told "that's the way it has always been done." Wrong answer and libelous. In actuality, no one ever said that. What was said was, we are complying with the orders that govern the flow of information. I know you then said we should have the order changed, but let's take a look at just one order that deals with principles of

Department of Defense Directive 5122.5 states, "It is DoD policy to make available timely and accurate information so that the public, the Congress, and the news media may assess and understand the facts about national security and defense strategy."

The order then goes on to explain how to provide direction on accomplishing that mission. "Information shall be made fully and readily available ... unless its release is precluded by national security constraints or valid statutory mandates or exceptions.

Reports of a concluded deployment or even reports from a deployment currently underway do not compromise national security and are in keeping with the order's policy that "open and independent reporting shall be the principal means of coverage of U.S. military operations."

Not only do we have an obligation to inform the public, we need to inform those that live here and support the operation of the Station

The order states, "A free flow of general and military information shall be made available, without censorship or propaganda, to the men and women of the armed forces and their dependents

Welcoming a squadron to our community, paying tribute to the accomplishments of a unit recently departed or highlighting the training opportunities our Marines and Sailors receive by way of deployments throughout the Pacific Theater is how we tell the Marine Corps story.

Any information that might adversely affect national security, threaten the safety or privacy of our personnel or their families has, and will continue to be stricken with red ink from the editor's pen to the best of our ability.

Seat belts save lives, avoid tickets

Lance Cpl. Giovanni Lobello Combat Correspondent

The military police aboard the Station have been keeping an eye on passengers and drivers not wearing their seat belts.

The Click It or Ticket Campaign, which began May 24, is done two times a year; in the spring and again during the winter. More than 13,000 law enforcement agencies and approximately $30 million are spent in support of the program nationwide.

According to National Highway Traffic Safety Administration the strategy used in the campaign is called "high-visibility enforcement."

"We publicize what we are doing and then back it up," said Sgt. Ryan Wilkinson, Provost Marshal's Office accident investigators division chief. "For the two weeks of the campaign we will be targeting people not wearing seat belts. Usually it depends on the military policeman if he wants to give a ticket or just a warning. But now it will be an automatic ticket if you are not wearing a seat belt."

Checkpoints will be set-up around the Station to emphasize the seriousness, said Wilkinson.

"We will be profiling unbelted

Police locking in on speeders

Lance Cpl. Giovanni Lobello Combat Correspondent

Experienced or not, everyone is occasionally tempted to drive too fast.

According to Cpl. Nicholas Perez, Provost Marshal's Office military policeman, MPs will now be cracking down on the speeding problem aboard the Station.

"In the past we were not very strict with speeding, but now that we have our radars back, we intend to be more active," said Perez. "Before, we relied on catching speeders while tracking behind them."

Before radars can be used, Perez said MPs must receive specific training.

"You have to be certified in reading, setting up and disassembling the radar gun," explained Perez. "Drivers, unfortunately are misguided and think it's their right to see the radar. But it's not, it's at the officers discretion whether or not he wants to show the radar to the driver."

Points on license should be a reason to follow the given speed limit, explained Perez. "If caught speeding and given a ticket, you will get points on your license," added Perez. "If you already have points and get another ticket, it's possible that your license can be suspended. A driver is allowed 12 points in 12 months and 18 point in 24 months."

Those given a speeding ticket for 17 km over the speed limit will receive three points on their license. Speeding violations of 18-24 km will result in four points and 25-34 km will result in five points given on a license.

For those driving 35 km over the speed limit, an automatic license suspension will be imposed and possible apprehension.

The fact that speed limits are not posted throughout the Station is not a good reason to drive fast, said Perez.

"The speed limit everywhere on the Station is 25 km per hour unless posted," added Perez.

Sgt. Ryan Wilkinson, PMO accident investigator division chief, said, "Speeding in school zones is a big problem. We will be heavily enforcing the schools with hand radars to make sure speed limits are being followed."

Speeding is a problem that can be avoided with a little patience and keeping the safety of others in mind, said Perez. It is not necessary to drive fast especially on this Station because it is so small.

to strap up."

Drivers and front passengers usually are good about wearing their seat belts, added Wilkinson.

"We have a bigger problem with the passengers in the back seats," said Wilkinson.
"I have seen kids running around. If a car is stopped for the driver and passengers not wearing their seat belt, it is important that the driver knows he will be the one held responsible."

According to the NHTSA, since the "Click It or Ticket It" campaign started in 1997, seat belt usage has risen 33 percent.

Last year, the national "Click It or Ticket" campaign increased seat belt usage four percent to 79 percent.

For the rest of the weekend, all III MEF and MCBJ service members will be required to be on base or in their off-base residences from midnight to 5 a.m.

Marine Corps Community Services will be providing many discounted activities to entertain service members and their families to accommodate the stand down weekend. Although this new policy is aimed at lowering the incident rate in our host foreign country, Blackman said the incident rate here is much lower when compared to military communities in the United States.

"It wasn't one incident, but a general trend that needs reversing. We owe it to the Okinawan community [and mainland Japan] to be sincerely helpful and productive members (of the community), and this is a tangible way for us to be serious," he said.

Combat Visual Information Center provides Station with photography needs

Cpl. Robert W. Wynkoop

Combat Correspondent

The shutter falls at the push of a button — instantly a moment in time is captured forever. From the "tip of the spear" in forward deployed locations to garrison commands here and stateside, combat photographers strive to provide lasting images of the Marine Corps as well as full-service audiovisual assistance to military units here.

Located in Building One, room 115, the Combat Visual Information Center can assist local service members and commands in a variety of ways, according to Sgt. Anthony J. Adamson, CIVIC combat photographer.

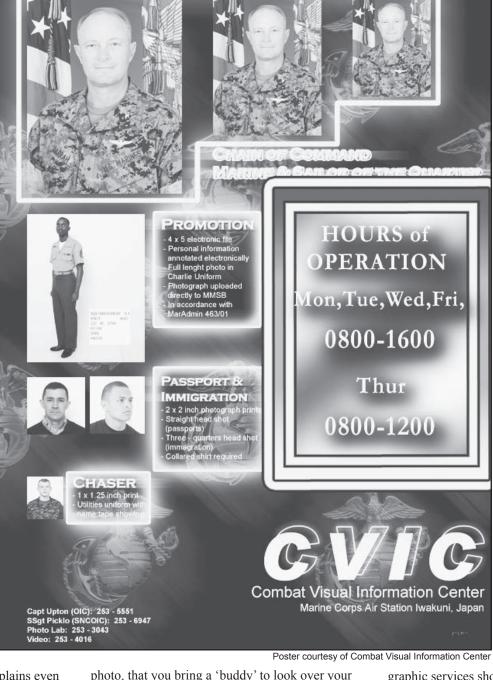

"Our shop is here to support others with on-site photo shoots, where a photographer goes to your location and takes group pictures or documents an event, as well as studio photography, where service members come here and take individual photos for military use," Adamson said.

CVIC's services can range from staff noncommissioned officer selection board photos, command board images and brig chaser photos to no-fee passport photos and the United Through Reading Program videotaped storytelling for deployed parents and more, he said.

The center operates with four Marine combat photographers and one Japanese civilian studio photographer, who work hard to ensure each photograph taken is of the highest quality, but Adamson explains even the photo subjects have to put in effort of their own – ensuring that they are responsible for a neat and professional military appearance in the photo shoot.

"We recommend when taking a selection board photo, that you bring a 'buddy' to look over your uniform before you take the picture. You should check and recheck the placement of ribbons and devices as well. The photographers may adjust the subject's uniform if they notice a discrepancy, but it's only a courtesy. The subject is ultimately responsible for his appearance."

For passport photos, subjects must wear a dark colored, collared shirt and chaser card photos are taken in the uniform of the day.

The United Through
Reading Program is another service offered by the center.
The program allows deployed family members to record themselves reading a book to loved ones back in the States. The service is free and open to anyone and the only requirement according to Lance Cpl. Brian Henner, CVIC combat photographer, is parents must bring their own VHS videocassette to record to.

"They may call or come in and let us know they want to sit down and read to their children. We have a new, private reading area with a comfortable chair and lamp that is used for the program. Most people bring their own books to read, but we do have some books available for use.

"We set up the video camera and press record and let the parents read to their children and send a special message," Henner said. "We try to have the tape duplicated for use within the same day depending on work load, but the latest a tape will be ready is one business day."

graphic services should be filled out one week prior to the event or desired project start date. The center generally utilizes a five-day turnaround time for services. The CVIC photo studio is open Mondays through Fridays from 8 a.m. until 4 p.m.

The dangerous black widow spider is disarmingly small, only about one-and-a-half inches in diameter.

Venomous spiders make camp in Iwakuni

Lance Cpl. David Revere
Combat Correspondent

Not every Marine Corps Air Station Iwakuni resident works for the government.

Western Black Widow spiders have attempted to make a home here since 1997. Additionally, efforts to eradicate the pests have revealed a small number of two of their cousins: the Brown Widow and the Red Back.

The Brown Widow and the Red Back have been identified in other Japanese port cities, but the Black Widow has only been found on the Station, making containment and eradication crucial.

The population of all three spiders has decreased 60-70 percent from 2001 due to the efforts of Facilities Pest Control Department, yet an educated awareness of these uninvited guests remains important to possess.

"Our pest control team conducts spider inspections every day of the workweek," said Lt. j.g. Fred Kelly, Facilities maintenance officer. "They are diligent in searching the places we know the spiders live."

While no spiders have been found along the fence line, construction of a 20-inch tall spider fence is slated to begin in the near future along the boundary between the Station and the city.

"The Spider population is contained to the Station," said Kelly.
"None have been found off Station and none have been found near the fence line."

Annually, the Station brings an entomologist aboard to survey the current state of the spider population and review the discover and eradication methods employed by the Station.

According to the Washington State University Web site, mature, female, black widow spiders have a diameter of approximately one-and-a-half inches. Adult spiders are distinctively shiny and dark colored. The most commonly recognized feature of female black widows is the presence of a red or red-orange hourglass pattern on the underside of the abdomen.

Male widow spiders are much smaller (about 1/4 size) than the females and are not capable of biting humans.

Red Back spiders are distinguished from black widows by a telltale red stripe down the back. Native to Australia, these spiders were first discovered in Japan in 1995.

Brown Widow spiders vary from light tan to dark brown or almost black, with variable markings of black, white, yellow, orange, or brown on the back of their abdomens. Unlike the Black Widow, the hourglass on the Brown Widow's abdomen is orange to yellow-orange in color.

Brown Widow spiders were first discovered in Japan in 1995, and spotted on the Station in July, 2001.

According to the Washington State University Web site, this spider family builds loose and irregular mesh-type webs, often on plants, in loose stone or wood piles, or in the corners of rooms, garages or outbuildings.

A bite from one of these spiders may cause little immediate pain and may go unnoticed at first.

"Black Widow bites are rare," said Navy Lt. Eugene Garland, Branch Medical Clinic environmental health officer, "This type of spider will generally curl into a ball and drop to the ground when confronted. Bites are usually the result of someone putting their foot into a shoe that has been left outside or climbing into bedding while camping."

According to the Washington State University Web site, slight, local swelling and reddening at the bite site are early signs, followed by intense muscular pain, rigidity of the abdomen and legs, difficulty in breathing, and nausea.

"If you think you've been bitten and are unable to identify the type of bite, closely observe the bite for several days and be sensitive to any symptoms that may develop," said Garland. "If symptoms develop, seek medical assistance immediately." According to Garland, Station residents should always have situational awareness regarding spiders.

"I also suggest being observant when working in infrequently disturbed areas such as gardens, crawl spaces, and outbuildings," said Garland

The Red Back is so-named for the red, vertical stripe along it's back.

The Black Widow Spider is easily distinguished by the red, hourglass symbol on the underside of it's abdomen.

If you think you've been bitten...

- · Try to identify the spider. Save it, if possible.
- · Clean the affected area well with soap and water.
- · Apply a cool compress over the bite location and elevate the affected limb to heart level.
- · Aspirin or acetaminophen may be used to relieve minor symptoms in adults. Do not give Aspirin to children only acetaminophen.
- · Place a snug bandage above the bite to slow or halt the venom from spreading. The bandage should be tight enough to slow the flow of blood at skin level, while maintaining circulation in the limb.
- · Most importantly, seek immediate medical attention. This is particularly important for Black Widow bites.

The Brown Widow is identified by it's yellow and brown spotted back.

If you identify a venomous spider...

- Do not attempt to capture it
- Contact Facilities help desk immediately (253-3131)
- · If possible, don't kill the spider so that a positive identification can be made.

Service members make special visit

Lance Cpl. Ruben D. Calderon Combat Correspondent

UDONTHANI, Thailand — A group of Marines and Sailors, participating in Exercise Cobra Gold '04 here, traveled to a small village to pay a special visit to special children, May 20.

Navy Lt. Shaun Brown, Marine Aircraft Group 12 chaplain, and Petty Officer 1st Class Delores M. Davis-Stewart, MAG-12 religious program specialist, invited seven Marines and Sailors to travel to the remote village of Donwai, located approximately one mile away from the border of Laos, to the Sarnelli House, a home for orphans who are HIV positive.

The orphanage gives a home to 54 HIV positive children. Their ages range from 4 months to 15 years old.

"The Sarnelli House was opened in 1999 for children who tested positive for HIV or AIDS. The children living here receive anti-retroviral AIDS drugs, food, clothing and most importantly, love," said Father Michael J. Shea, Catholic priest and supervisor of the orphanage.

has been stationed in Thailand for 38 years has worked with orphans and widows his entire stay here.

"Here, in the northeast of Thailand, is the only place where HIV infected children come. The children are orphans because their parents died of AIDS and they have no one else to take care of them. Their families don't seem to want anything to do with them, so they bring them here. Here we happily take them in," added Shea. Funding for the orphanage comes from various organizations in the United States and in Germany, and some from the Thai government

The Thai government allows the children to attend public schools. Although the children must attend in anonymity, for fear of the students parents

"If people were to find out that their children are attending school with children who are HIV positive, who knows what could happen," stated Shea. "We want the children to try to have a normal life." The children are happy and comfortable as much as they can possibly be, considering the circumstances. They are also responding well to the medicine they receive, added Shea.

The children jumped with excitement to see the service members arrive. The Marines and Sailors brought along clothes, toys and candy to give to the orphanage.

"It's very humbling to see these beautiful children and knowing that they have a disease, said Davis-Stewart. "I have two children in the same age group as the orphans here, and it just makes me think how unfortunate it is for them.'

"I didn't know that all the children were HIV positive. It just makes me feel more appreciative of all the things I have. Experiencing this and seeing these children made me think of my daughter back home," said Staff Sgt. Jabari A. McDonald, Marine (All-Weather) Fighter Attack Squadron 225 communication navigation technician.

"The orphans live in solitude and in isolation," said Shea. "They are outcast to their own country and even to the world. Yet their ignorance to the world and their disease, being that they are so young, make them far more precious. All they have in the world is me, the orphanage staff of 16 and each other.'

Donations can be sent to Reverend Patrick O'Brien at the Sarnelli House, C.Ss.R. Redemptorist Mission Office, P.O. Box 6, Glenview, Illinois 60025-

Fun run sparks energy awareness

Station and local residents enjoyed a cool, evening competition May 25 in honor of Energy Awareness Week.

Youth ages 15 and under ran 2.5 kilometer along the sea wall, followed by a five-km adult race.

"Besides advertising Energy Awareness Week, this is a way to get people out of their houses so they aren't burning electricity," said Chief Petty Officer Richard Robinson, Facilities energy conservation manager.

Instead, the runners burned calories as they competed for overall and age-division trophies.

Michael Boland, 12, won first place overall in the youth run, scorching the asphalt in just under 11 min-

The competitors were reminded of the importance of conserving energy, even as they spent their own.

"I enjoyed just getting to run, getting out of the house and saving energy," said Mercedes Martinez, 11. Martinez came home with a 2nd place trophy overall for the females in the youth run. "My dad challenged me," said Mia Lasyone, 10. "He said, 'Come on, you'll have fun and you'll come home to mom with a trophy!' Lasyone wasn't disappointed, coming home to mom with a third year-old age division. The five-km race also benefited from some healthy competition, but having fun was the name of the game.

Summer begins with a splash

Story and photos by Lance Cpl. David Revere

Combat Correspondent

With three swimming pools on Station, residents need not worry about what to do for fun during these steamy summer months

The Main Outdoor Pool, the Club Iwakuni Pool, and the IronWorks Gym Pool offer watery solutions to the heat.

"I don't know of any other base that's this size and offers three swimming pools," said Kris Gildersleeve, Marine Corps Community Services swimming instructor. "We're definitely here for fun. The facilities here are awesome. People should take advantage of what we have to offer.'

Those who plan to utilize the pool this summer must remember to comply with all directions from the lifeguards. Rules such as taking a shower before entering the pool, no eating, drinking or smoking in the pool or on the pool deck, no pets allowed at the pools, no rough play in or near the pool, and no rafts or air mattresses are set into place to protect pool patrons.

"Safety is always our first concern" said Gildersleeve. "We serve all ages. While you may be an able-bodied 19-year-old who knows you can do back flips off the diving board, you may not realize there is a 5-year-old nearby. Try to ensure the safety of all patrons, not just yourself."

According to Gildersleeve, it's important not only to be aware of what's around, but also what's above.

"Always wear sunscreen" said Gildersleeve. "Even on those cloudy days. That's when you can get the most burnt because you don't realize the (ultra violet) rays are affecting you."

Marine Corps Community Services aquatics department will also be holding swimming classes this summer beginning June 14.

"We have four, two-week sessions," said Gildersleeve.

"All levels of American Red Cross swimming lessons are available for either the morning or the afternoon."

Residents can register now at the MCCS aquatics office in the IronWorks Gym.

For more information on the Station pools, call 253-4966.

Nicholas Pena enjoys some refreshing fun in the shallow end at the Main Outside Pool, May 30. The 50-meter pool also has a three meter deep end.

Sean Pena practices his game while cooling off at the Main Outdoor Pool, May 30. In addition to water basketball facilities, the pool has a diving board and three swimming lanes for individual exercise.
